HOW TO ENJOY AN OFFBEAT DESTINATION

Start early , keep minimum two hours margin and plan to reach before dark. Going up for the first time you could face difficulties finding your way. Take proper guidance from the resort's city office before departing. Do not be misguided by locals, stick to the path suggested by the resort unless a road block is reported due to some reason.

Do not expect very professional services. Most of the these places employ local staff, trained on the job. Employing locals is a commitment to help the community.

Food at such places is simple, homelike, and choice could be limited. City chefs are not very willing to work at such offbeat resorts. They have to avail the services of regional cooks.

Since business is very seasonal, they cannot afford two shift employees and as such service hours are limited and have to be abided by strictly.

At most of the resorts water could be sufficient only for your basic needs, not for washing clothes and cars.

Electrical/Telecommunication services could be momentarily disrupted. Bear till alternate arrangements are made. Most of the better ones have good backups.

Restaurant/Room service might seem slow, as compared to town hotels. Do not push after all you are there to unwind and relax.

Furniture/Fixture in rooms should be sufficient to meet all your basic requirements. Do not expect contemporary craftsmanship and frills.

Offbeat / Hill Resorts seem to be over priced. Consider such places generally have a meager 25-30 % annual occupancy and have to provide for recurring expenses for the entire year. Do not look for a direct Value-For-Money deal. It is the experience you are paying for and not the hardware.

Staff being local, are not used to rude and harsh city attitudes. Put in some extra effort to be kind and polite to them. You will find them all out to serve you.

Probe the property's brochures, websites, thoroughly and satisfy all possible queries before booking. Do not depend entirely on your agent. It is quite possible he might not have visited the resort at all.

Be ready for a quieter/cooler place than expected.

Taking along children/youngsters, prepare them well. Tell them what is available and what is not. They too should have the same inclination as yours

Convey special needs for infants and aged before hand and get a confirmation.

Many offer optional soft adventure activities. If interested, check price and availability specifically during the period of your stay.

Some Interesting places at Mukteshwar

MukteshwarDham:

Mukteshwar gets its name from an 350-year-old temple of Shiva, known as MukteshwarDham, situated atop 8000 Ft ASL, the highest point of the quaint little hamlet, within the veterinary institute's campus.

ChaulikiJaali:

Just below the temple are an outcrop of rocks, an overhang with a sheer drop of approx. 2000Ft., great for rock climbing, rappelling and paragliding, providing an enchanting view of the deep wooded valley and sunset vistas. Locally known as the Chauli-ki-Jali, This is a great place to observe raptors like the The Himalayan Eagle and other feathered scavengers as they fly around majestically at eye level and below as you stand atop 8000Ft.

PWD Guest House or The Jim Corbett's Bungalow:

Walking distance from the Mukteshwar Temple is this beautiful colonial Bungalow which retains the old world charm and both from the inside out seems to be frozen in time. The only spot in Kumaon from where you can enjoy a 180 Degree panoramic view of the Himalayas range. This Guest house has housed Jim Corbett for long stretches whilst his hunting sprees for the man eaters, the details have been written by Jim Corbett himself in his book 'Man Eater of Mukteswar' when he shot one of the most infamous man eaters in those days.

IVRI:

The Imperial Bacteriological Laboratory or as now known as The Indian Veterinary Research Institute had its genesis on December 9, 1889 at Pune and relocated to Mukteshwar in 1893. Initially the laboratory at Mukteshwar was completed in 1898 but got destroyed by fire in 1899. It was resurrected in 1901. IVRI is responsible for preservation and maintenance of one of the densest forests of Kumaon rich in flora and fauna, home to Leopards, Black Bear, Wild Boar, Deer and over 250 species of birds.

Bhulmaria Forest:

Located inside the dense IVRI controlled forest a small trek leads you to this 1905 constructed colonial structure. Apparently, Jim Corbett shot the infamous Man eater at this spot.

BhaluGarh Waterfalls:

A small trek leads you to this secluded and pristine water fall, about 60 feet high. It's an ideal day picnic spot for nature lovers.

Vishnu Temple/Dol Ashram:

In the vicinity of Mukteshwar, Vishnu Temple is an important religious complex surrounded with beautiful deodar forest.

Managher Trek:

If you are interested in a nature trek through a dense coniferous forest then this is a great trek to go on with rare Rehsel Pine trees populating most part of the thick green. In the right season you will also be pleasantly surprised with a small waterfall inside the forest.

Kapileshwar Temple:

An ancient Shiva temple, constructed by Katyuri kings around 8th-10th century. This secluded temple is situated on the confluence of Kumiya and Sakuni rivers. A nice drive in the forest and a small trek will lead you to Kapileshwar Temple.

Devasthal:

Located at an altitude of 2450 meters. Devasthal peak is an emerging optical astronomical site for Indian telescopes. Currently, a 130-cm optical telescope is working at the site. The sites are managed by the Aryabhata Research Institute of Observational Sciences (ARIES), Nainital.

Mukteshwar is located very close to the lake towns of Nainital, Bhimtal, Naukuchiatal and Sattal which are just 1.5 Hrs driving distance. The Almora Town and Jageshwar Temples can be done in a day tour. The Jim Corbett National Park however would need at least a night's stay to enjoy the wildlife safaris, Jim Corbett's Museum and The Corbett's waterfall. Thanks to its height of 8000 Ft above sea level it has the best sunset, sunrise and Himalayan views. The widest angle can be seen from the guest house which is the dead end of the road. The Cliff at Mukteshwar is a great for spotting raptors especially the Himalayan Eagle.
